

AAUW members are invited to participate in an online diversity workshop sponsored by Edmonds SnoKing Branch.

Saturday, June 5, 10 a.m. to noon

Microaggressions: What They Are and How to Respond

Our interpersonal exchanges are filled with micro- and macro-aggressions within the strong overlay of institutional racism. This workshop will examine what microaggressions are and, when committed, how to respond in a way that reduces harm and affirms people in the fullness of their humanity. Facilitated by Aisha Hauser.

Aisha Hauser, MSW, is an accomplished religious educator, facilitator, author and advocate. She started her career in the field of social work before moving on to faith development and anti-racism advocacy. She is one of the authors in the groundbreaking book, Centering: Navigating Race, Authenticity and Power in Ministry.

Aisha has offered workshops all over the country on racism, how to navigate difficult conversations, and sexuality education, among others. Learn more on her website connectlearngrow.org

Please register in advance using this link.

After registering, you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the meeting.